American Building vs. European Destruction

San Francisco State College is building a campus, a new campus. In Europe today, there is destruction, destruction of schools as well as other buildings.

San Francisco State is building a new campus from the ground up. The athletic plant is already under way and is expected to be ready for use by fall semester. If it were not, there would be no place for football games, soccer games, football practice, track meets.

NO ACADEMIC ATTENTION

But the academic life at State has not received the immediate attention that the athletic plant has. The campus, with its one good building for college classes, its temporary buildings and its six times condemned main building, College hall, is awaiting an opportunity to retire to a less strenuous life as firewood for some deserving charity.

In Annex A and B, a student leaning against the wall is apt to find himself in the next classroom. Ordinary lectures and class room discussions can be heard easily in the next room. Faculty members walk through the class-rooms to get to their offices.

TOO MANY FIRES

In College hall half a dozen fires have been stopped before the building was destroyed. The building contains the registrar's files and records (vital to 25,000 students), the library (vital to every student and faculty member), and class-rooms, odd-shaped though they may be.

The well-named "Black Hole of Calcutta," where there is no possibility of ventilation, is used for visual instruction in many departments. It is one of two rooms where motion pictures or slides can be used on the campus to instruct college students. Students who have not built up a high resistance to suffocation are advised not to sign up for courses offered in the room.

Rooms in College hall are so shaped, many of them, that an instructor can see all of his class from only one place in the room. Some rooms are formed from sections of others that are at right angles to each other.

Four hundred forty volts of electricity run through high tension wires, which are only 15 feet from College hall.

Low Pipes Damage High Noggin; It Hurts!

"Eddie McFue is six feet, four inches tall. Eddie McFue has bumps on his head."

"Did you ever see those pipes strung across the ceiling in the basement of College hall?" Eddie asks. "Well, I didn't."

As a result of his extreme height and a slight touch of short sightedness, Eddie is now sporting a pair of wicked-looking lumps on his noggin.

Eddie is a bit taller than the engineers figured on when they constructed College hall way back sometime. Thus, Eddie hit the pipe both coming and going before he learned better.

Now Eddie cowers visibly when he walks through the basement of College hall. And he always ducks very low in front of the library where the pipes are strung.

But Eddie is very discouraged.

He is six feet, four inches tall and he has bumps on his head and he is very sad and he is going to transfer to Cal next semester.

Men, Women to Model In Friday Fashion Show

Spring fashions will be previewed Friday, April 4, in the women's gym when members of the Bib 'n' Tucker club present their annual fashion show and dance. Men as well as women models will be featured in the show, which will go on about 10 p. m.

Music by Roland Drayer will be played for the dancers and the models. Women models have been selected from the club membership, while the men were selected from the student body at large.

Carlene Miller and her committee are working on the decorations for the gym. Tickets are 35 cents per person. The dance will start at 8 p. m. instead of the usual 9, because of the fashion parade.

Students of Sophomore standing or better with a 2.0 average in sciences are requested to inform the Science Department.

Ex Board Discusses Organization Of Proposed Student Constitution

25,000 Staters' Records Ruined If Fire Results

A fire in the record department of College hall would destroy the school records of 25,000 students and cause a serious situation, it was shown today by Miss Florence Vance, registrar.

The records of every person who has ever attended State are kept in files in a small, inadequately lighted, poorly ventilated room. Student Records in Danger

If these files were burned or impaired in any way, many students and alumni would be affected, Miss Vance revealed. "All teachers are selected according to their record at school, and the chances of State graduates would be decidedly hampered if their school cards were destroyed," Miss Vance emphasized.

There is no fire proofing in the small department devoted to some of the records. Copies of these are filed in Sacramento. They could be recorded but only at considerable cost. Contained in the room are machines and equipment worth more than $3500.

A Densigraph machine valued at $2500, an adding machine costing $200, and a Marchand comptometer worth $375 are all kept in the hazardous room in College hall.

Chico Records Destroyed

These figures do not include costs for the many typewriters, desks, and filing cabinets also situated in the department. Also contained there are class rolls and statistical reports which are very necessary to enable the school to run efficiently.

As an example of what could easily happen to State, Miss Vance cites the fire which occurred at Chico State in August, 1927. The Chico administration building was burned to the ground, and the college is still attempting to straighten out the dilemma which was caused by the loss of records.

NOTICE!

Barbara Biggs won the Queen Contest against 15 other contestants. She is to go to Cal-Poly later this month.

Aimed at providing a more integrated and widely representative student ex-board, State's newly planned constitution will seat members of the various campus organizations rather than the class officers and the four representatives of men and women.

Student Body President Morley Carrothers made this announcement today after a meeting of the present board last night.

President Carrothers stated that the delegates from the activities groups will represent a far greater percentage of the student body than the most of the present board members do.

Clarifying this statement, he explained that the class officers are often elected by as few as 20 to 30 votes, while officers of the campus organizations represent groups that are more active and closely associated.

The new constitution discussion was continued last night. Members of the board predict that it will be passed.

At a later date the general student body will vote on its adoption.

Only three seats on the newly planned ex-board have been carried over from the plan of the old constitution. They are the treasurer, vice-president and secretary.

The nine new seats are for representatives of athletics, publications, A. W. S., A. M. S., art, drama, forensics, rally chairman, music, and the club council.

If passed, the new constitution will become effective next fall.

NOTICE!

U. S. Senator Gerald P. Nye has been asked by the campus Peace Group to speak here Friday. Classes will be dismissed if Senator Nye can appear at State College.

June Birthday Prize In San Francisco Area

Being born in San Francisco on June 30, 1918, is a way to get $1000 or a part thereof.

Any one who fills the above requirements should get in touch with the National Broadcasting System, 111 Sutter street, immediately. The sum is given away as part of the "Your Happy Birthday" program, according to NBC officials.

State Raises a New Campus

Dr. Alexander C. Roberts, president of the college, and Mrs. Grace Leathurby, professor of education, look over the relief map of the Lake Merced campus. The California Legislature is now deliberating the passage of the bill for the completion of the new campus.

Legislature Ponders New Campus Bill

With the California legislature now deliberating passage of the bill that authorizes a $3,000,000 appropriation to S. F. State College for the completion of the Lake Merced campus, President Alexander C. Roberts today summed up the amount of work already done on the project both in legislation and actual construction.

Spring Concert At 8:15 Tonight Marina Jr. High

The annual spring band concert will be held tonight at 8:15 in the Marina Jr. High School auditorium.

Mr. Ernst, the band director, claims that this program is designed to appeal to a majority of the college students ranging, as it does from the classics of the old masters to symphonic jazz numbers of this era.

The band president, Gerald Sharkey, stated that if the student body supports this concert, the band is going to inaugurate a series of open air concerts on the lawn. The ushering for the concert tonight will be done by members of the Phi Epsilon Mu, men's athletic fraternity.

The program will include selections from Tchaikowsky, Bach, Victor Herbert, Stephen Foster; a symphonic jazz number, "The Song of the Bayou," by Rube Bloom, and William Tell Overture.

The student body is urged to help "fill the house" tonight to show its approval of the work being done toward co-operation of the various campus groups.

Course in Isms Offered Next Year

A chance to study political leaders and their ideas will be offered in a new course next fall, to be known as Government 15, carrying 3 units.

The course centers around the life and ideas of the men dominating the world stage of today: Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin, Roosevelt, and others. Here is an opportunity to get first hand differences in the isms—liberalism, communism, fascism.

An attempt will be made to clear the nature of democracy and the "isms" that challenge it in the present war by means of the biographical approach. Government 15 will be open to all lower division students. Mrs. Olive Cowell will offer the course in the fall and Dr. Floyd Cave in the spring semester.

Mrs. Sulit to Speak On Filipines Today Noon

"Filipino-American Relations" will be discussed by Mrs. Estella R. Sulit, attorney and social worker, at the meeting of the International Relations club, today at noon.

Students interested in this subject are invited to attend the lecture, in the Activities room.

Financial progress toward completion of the campus, he listed as follows:

1. Purchase of the 57-acre site with a $300,000 State grant.
2. Receipt of a $400,000 appropriation through the Consolidated Building Program of 1937.
3. Federal contribution of $365,000 for WPA work on the project.
4. Passage of a bill by the last legislature authorizing sale of the present campus and use of the proceeds for the construction at Lake Merced.

Dr. Roberts made the following review of physical work completed at the new site since the first ground was broken in April, 1940:

1. Clearing the land and getting it ready for grading and construction.
2. Moving to the edge of the new campus 1300 feet of 30-inch city water supply pipe that had formerly run directly through the middle of the site.
3. Construction of 1800 feet of concrete storm sewer, six feet in diameter, to carry storm water from the Ingleside district through the campus canyon and into Lake Merced.
4. Extensive grading to make the canyon suitable for play fields and to prepare the rest of the site for construction of buildings, roads and walks. An estimated 200,000 cubic yards of earth have been moved.
5. Partial construction, by the state and WPA, of a boulevard 80 feet wide, along the entire south border of the campus.
6. Transfer from Treasure Island to the campus site, at a cost of $10,000, 400 truck loads of trees, shrubs, plants and bulbs. Their original estimated cost to the State was $300,000.
7. Construction of a lath house, 60 by 100 feet, and a 12-foot fence for a wind break, at a cost of $3000. Completion of a service house for the ground men and gardeners; estimated cost, $2500.
8. Excavation well under way for a glass house, 30 by 60 feet, under a WPA project. Propagation beds, all electrically heated, provide the most modern facilities, according to Leo C. Nee, comptroller. Thousands of new plants are being rooted every day.

An expenditure of over half a million dollars is represented in the completed work on the new campus and the cost of the land, stated Dr. Roberts.

There is another $500,000 left in the various funds, he added. It will be used before fall in the installation of water, gas and electric lines, sewers, roads, paths, sports, playfields, fences, walls, sprinkling systems, a pumping plant and other buildings and planting.

"This work that we have finished and that which is soon to be completed," Dr. Roberts said, "will make the Lake Merced site ready for construction of all the college buildings."

War Razes an Old Campus

Campuses like this one "somewhere in the interior of England" are continually being wrecked by bombers as the European war progresses. Meanwhile, San Francisco State College is trying to have a new campus built for itself. In these times the people of a nation feel the value of their schools and colleges. Today the people of California are building State.

Legislature Has a Job to Do

Let's make no bones about it. We of the State College student body want a new campus. We want it badly. We are dependent upon our State Legislature for completing the work it has already started. We should, therefore, unanimously let our legislators know of our extreme need, of our desires. That is why copies of today's Golden Gater and several yet to come are being mailed to each and every legislator.

There is nothing particularly subtle about this. There is no need to be. Everyone knows what we want. Our job, therefore, is to point out why we want it. On this basis, the hard working staff of the Gater has been recently gathering and organizing facts and writing them into stories of our pitiful, decrepit old campus. This material is strictly factual, but does its own arguing for the completion of the new campus.

Reward Is in the Unborn Future

There are a number of us at State who will never attend a class on the new campus, even if the legislature smacked our bills through and started our buildings now. The two upper classes, for instance, have no personal stake in the educational benefits and increased opportunity resulting from the healthier environment. Personal stake has never been a motive of the many people in school and the many more who have already gone out from State. These students who have given so earnestly of their time, their ingenuity and their youthful enthusiasm have certainly not done so with the thought of personal gain.

Why, then, have they labored and sweat? Because in spite of the increasingly crowded conditions, the dirt, the fire hazard, the inconvenience, the slum-like buildings in a tiny block in a slum neighborhood, in spite of this depressing atmosphere, they recognized in State College a spark of something great. They knew that the spark must some day have a chance to grow so that they no longer would have to be ashamed of where they went to school. They knew that when the spark need no longer struggle for life against overwhelming odds, then it would flame to its fullest usefulness to the community. Then students and alumni alike could hold their heads high.

Poverty of Intellect and Pocketbook Differs

That spark is the American goal of higher education for every individual in the community who is intellectually able to benefit from college work. The great majority of students who are in lower economic brackets are not necessarily in lower intelligence brackets, too. There is absolutely no correlation. The goal of the State College system has been to avoid penalizing young people for their economic poverty. This has been a worthy goal, forwarded by many far-sighted people.

San Francisco State College is like a strong man, stout hearted and keen minded, set to run a successful race, but who is bound hand and foot. He struggles in vain against his environment of rope but time only makes it tighter. His great potentialities are wasted until he is released to run his good race.

Let us hope that the legislators, seeing the great potentialities of State College, will cut the cords.

From Someone Else's Editorial

I like an editorial I read the other day, a part of which might well apply to us. It was from the March 2 issue of the Salt Lake City Tribune:

"While the totalitarian forces of Europe and Asia are bombing cities and destroying priceless monuments of antiquity, of art and architecture, of industry and enlightenment, of charity and religion, the democratic population and government of America are building and dedicating to future generations stupendous works of peace, progress and prosperity. One system has adopted a policy of retrogression and destruction—the other represents a policy of progress and construction."

BICK.

The Prexy Says...

Mr. Morley Carrothers, Pres. Associated Students.

Dear Morley:

I have read the constitution as submitted to the Executive Board and have noted the changes. I am pleased to approve the changes, and wish for the Associated Students a happy administration of their affairs under the new constitution. Please extend to Ray Berns and his committee my personal thanks for their care in making the revision in the constitution. It is all well done. Cordially yours, ALEXANDER C. ROBERTS, President.

Flash!

Voicing their whole-hearted approval, the Executive Board last night passed unanimously the new Constitution and its By-Laws which were presented to the Board for passage or rejection.

Last night's session was a continuation of the previous Monday evening's meeting. At that first meeting, the Constitution was discussed and revised. Last night, the By-Laws were discussed, and, at the conclusion of the meeting, which lasted two and one-half hours, the new document was passed without a dissenting vote.

Inasmuch as both Dr. Roberts, president of the college, and Dean Mary A. Ward have put their stamp of approval on the new Constitution, and inasmuch as the Board has accepted it, there remains but one step—passage by the student body—before the new Constitution will go into effect.

In order that the entire student body may understand, in all of its intricacies, the new Constitution, there will be at least two and probably three general student body assemblies held, according to Morley Carrothers, student prexy. At these general assemblies there will be five or six student leaders on a panel who will attempt an objective evaluation of the new document and a comparison with the present Constitution. The latter portion of these meetings will be thrown open for discussion and criticism from the floor, and, the third meeting will be the one at which the general student body will put their okay or veto on the new Constitution.

The first of these meetings will be held either this Friday or next Monday in the Rally Bowl. Details will be given in mimeographed sheets which will be placed in post boxes.

BERNS

In the Belfry...

IN the vast, primeval wastes of Parkside-By-The-Sea, a desert region three day's trek from here by mule train, there is a house.

And inside that house is Dopey. Dopey, my absurd little archipelago, is a cat. In fact, we might even go so far as to say that Dopey at one time had the unfortunate distinction of being an underprivileged cat.

In short, the blamed thing didn't get enough to eat, had no place to park, and didn't have a stitch to its name because of bad credit.

But those days are gone forever. Indeed, the darned thing now subsists on Grade "A" cream, frosting, T-bone steaks, and ice cream. A very poor second choice in Dopey's diet is hamburger.

And its room is nothing short of palatial.

Why this sudden change? Because a female (yes, she's a resident of this institution) named Ledna Anne, or something, decided to mother the poor, unsuspecting feline.

And now, Dopey, instead of growing up to be the fightin', snarl-in', vicious alley cat his pappy always wanted him to be, is, instead, a pampered lounge lizard.

ANDERSON

With the Cast... It's Eddie Dowling

A JACK of all theater trades is Eddie Dowling, one of America's first gentlemen of the theater. Mr. Dowling has been, at various times in his long and interesting career, a star in vaudeville, musical comedy, and legitimate drama; a playwright, a songwriter, a director, and a producer. As soon as you think that you have him safely classified in one field, up he pops in another. Needless to say, he has achieved more than ordinary success in each of the fields in which he has been occupied.

It all started back in Woonsocket, Rhode Island, where he was born. From there the trail leads to London, where his career as a singer began as a choir boy in the choir of St. Paul's Cathedral. In London he entered vaudeville after his change of voice forced him out of the choir. Returning to America when still a youth, he headed his own vaudeville act and after playing the "big time" stepped into musical comedy.

Dowling was not content, however, to be only a star. When the producers of "The Velvet Lady," in which he was appearing, decided that the musical comedy book was inadequate, he was engaged to re-write it, and to provide new lyrics. During this period of his career he was featured in several Ziegfeld Follies, at the time when W. C. Fields, Leon Errol, Will Rogers, Fanny Brice, Eddie Cantor, and Rae Dooley were providing comedy the like of which has not been equaled. Marrying Miss Dooley, his career continued both as writer and star of such popular musical comedies as "The Girl Behind the Gun," "Sally, Irene, and Mary" (pre Zanuck and Alice Faye), "The Sidewalk of New York," "Rainbow Man" and "Honeymoon Lane." He is so well remembered as the "Rainbow Man" that the phrase is still used today as description. In "Honeymoon Lane" Kate Smith made her stage bow, having been discovered by Mr. Dowling as a manicurist in a Washington, D. C., barber shop. "Honeymoon Lane" was filmed in 1931 with Mr. Dowling and wife, Rae Dooley, in the leading roles, but, although the picture was entertaining and a personal success for the Dowlings, it was too mild to make screen history because musicals were currently unpopular, and such pictures as "Little Caesar," "Public Enemy" and "Five Star Final" were scaring people into the theaters throughout the country. Since that time, the Dowlings have been of the stage exclusively.

During the 1936-37 season he surprised Broadway by participating as producer in the highly successful Maurice Evans revival of "Richard II." This "about face" of the song and dance man into the dramatic field to score a bull's-eye was looked upon as a stroke of luck.

However, the following year he scored another success with his production of Paul Vincent Carroll's "Shadow and Substance," which starred Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Julie Haydon, and won the Critics' Circle award as the outstanding imported play produced on Broadway during the season of 1937-38. The vote of the critics was unanimous; it was the first occasion the reviewers ever agreed, one and all, on the merits of a play. The next year another Paul Vincent Carroll play, "The White Steed," won the award for him again.

Returning to the boards in Philip Barry's "Here Come the Clowns," he was welcomed with enthusiasm. About this time he saw part of the Saroyan play, "My Heart's in the Highlands," and meeting the young Armenian playwright, persuaded him that he would buy the next play that Saroyan should write, sight unseen. Saroyan began writing the following Monday, May 8, 1939, and by the Saturday of the same week, May 13th, the first draft was finished.

Saroyan was determined that Dowling should create the role of Joe, the philanthropic loafer with money and a kind heart, but already having a heavy schedule of productions planned for the season, Eddie Dowling was reluctant to appear as star in a play. Finally persuaded by the Theater Guild and Mr. Saroyan, Dowling appeared as the star in the first production, in October, 1939. It has been playing ever since, in New York and on tour. At the risk of seeming repetitious, we must report that the Critics' Circle gave him another award, this time for the finest American play produced on Broadway. He is the only producer to be thus honored by New York critics, three times in succession. The Pulitzer Prize coming to "Time of Your Life" (first time in history that the critics and the P. P. committee agreed) makes the whole thing look a little anticlimactic.

Next on Mr. Dowling's schedule is a repertory of several of the successful plays which he has been behind. More about him, and the repertory plans in next week's column.

'Midst Confusion... The Days of Yore

In a corner of that faded wooden valley called Annex B, there is a shimmering light. Old residents of the valley, gnarled and bitter, stand guard around that light to see that the forces of disbelief and mockery do not dim its brilliance. Strangers gaze in awe at the phenomenon and a few venture questions at the stern-faced guardians who stand with their great arms folded and their faces pointed toward the dust clouds from Upper Field.

"Dost thou believe?" one sentry asks, and the morbid and the curious, anxious to satisfy their tourist sensibilities, lie and say, "Sure 'ting, pal, we believe. Yeah, man!" Their fingers are crossed behind their broad backs, for that is the way of unbelievers.

"Then you shall be told," says this sour-pussed picket. "Deep in the soul of that light, buddy," he begins, "lies the spirit of Joe Cleff. You wouldn't remember Joe Cleff, but in him was embodied the joys and the frustrations of all music majors. Joe died a long, long time ago. Life was beautiful in those days. The musicians frolicked along the floor of this once-verdant valley and had wonderful bull-sessions. Did you ever hear the one about the three Irishmen who—ah, but that's another tale.

"Yessir, Annex B was life and hope to these simple people. It was their good earth, for out of the grass which used to grow in the cracks of the concrete, these souls took their philosophy. There was never a dull moment, even during finals. Many was the time when Madame Nicoll would send disturbers scampering away from her door while she was trying to hold an examination of her class of Bonellis and Tetraxinis and Carusos.

"But that was a long time ago. You're probably too young to remember the time. But we preserve its rich memory by preserving the spirit of Joe Cleff."

"But what happened to Joe Cleff?" ask the strangers, not so much through curiosity, but because they are amused at the way the guard's dentures always slip when he pronounces the two "fs" at the end of Joe's name. "Did he drink too much and die?"

The sentry was not perturbed by the lack of respect at Music Alley's patron saint. "Yes," he drawled, "Joe did drink too much, but that isn't what killed him. Joe didn't even die here in the valley.

He developed an acute case of nostalgia when the valley was evacuated."

"Invasion?" jibed the strangers. "No," said the guard, oblivious to the implication, "Over-population. Joe grew too big for his britches. Once the residents of this valley were few and very happy. The mortality, as expressed by graduation—a rare factor in these days of increased requirements—was far from balanced by the birth-rates; new students, anxious to partake of the valley's fine musical-scholastic reputation.

"One day the city fathers got together and decided that they would have to forsake their homes and their birthrights. So one day, while the dust was yet high in the heavens, Joe and his people loaded pianos and clarinets and sheet music on their backs and left the valley. Joe died that day. He just turned purple and gurgled and died. He was just too used to his old way of life and all it held for him.

"And so we preserve the memory of this desolate old annex by keeping alive the spirit of Joe Cleff. He would have liked it. Got a cigarette?"

Charles Connell and Russell Paissant, both of Montreal, have a long-range farm program. If perseverance means anything, they'll have a farm yet.

Today they began an 18 months sentence for stealing a pig. Poissant got six months for stealing a horse in 1932. In 1933 he served 30 days for stealing hens. In 1937, both Poissant and Connell got a year for stealing turkeys.

Varsity Trackmen in Daily Workouts Despite Rain; Jayvees in First Win

Coming back strong after a heavy loss to Lowell, State's junior varsity track squad scored a sharp win over a pallid Sacred Heart prep team Wednesday, March 26.

The jayvee oval-circlers ran the high school lads off their feet. Some creditable performances and fast times were turned in, and Coach David J. Cox is already busy priming a few of the lads for varsity participation.

Looking good for State were John Finn, shot-putter; Carl Hunter, broad jumper; Bill McKay, 880 runner; and John Grantham, high jumper, broad jumper and discus man.

Money Flies

The average student last year spent $643.22. The women spent an average of $682.70 and the men $621.07.

Lowest average for any group was $511.58, the average for unorganized freshmen men. The highest, $876.82, was that of junior sorority members.

Organized women spent $210.74 more than unorganized women, and in the case of the men the difference was $293.30.

Greatest differences between expenditures of men and women was in percentage of the budget spent for recreation, amusement and clothing.

Fencing Team Set for San Jose Spartans

Fresh from their triumph at Hamilton Field last week, the fencing team again enters the fray. Their next opponent will be the saber-sharpers from San Jose State.

State's "fearsome four," Vic Vari, Bob Lee and the two Tildens, will journey down the peninsula next Thursday.

Although State has won both the previous encounters with San Jose, Coach Len Duckworth warns against over-confidence.

"The San Jose team will be altogether different from last year," said Duckworth. They have a new coach, Isaac Dundas, and a new whirlwind system which baffles opponents and is expected to thoroughly confuse our boys."

Under the Blotter

By GEORGE RUGE.

Some people are still harping on the sad case of the Louis-Simon affair. Said people are giving us the horse laff for slighting Simon, whom we referred to as "SIMPLE SIMON."

Alas, though Simon DID go a few more rounds than was expected, we still think that Joe Louis and Mike Jacobs are handing the public a large platter of stewed bull.

Some say that Louis is slipping, is unable to dispose of his opponents in the usual efficient way. But it is just possible that the Bomber received instructions before the fight, directing him to carry Simon, to make the giant look good to eager fans.

DUMB, YOU SAY?

After all, ringside seats represent a lot of silver for the average fight fan to shell out. Those one-minute-in-the-first-round affairs that Louis formerly handed the customers didn't set so well when the admission was high.

For our money we still look to funnymen Max Baer to crush Louis. And don't think that Max is the screwball he would have the public think he is. The Baer has a monthly income, every month—for life. This steady flow of dough comes in the form of annuities, the result of Baer's wisely invested fight money.

Moral: Don't take Max Baer too lightly as a heavyweight contender.

CAMPUS...

The sports department proposes to make money for the school and for themselves. Why not, dear reader, rent canoes during this rainy weather?

We could charge each student 25 cents per ride. The course would run the complete length of the canal which runs along the Annex A walk. You know—the one into which you stumble as you pass to class.

Or, perhaps, we could conduct a ferry service, thus saving students from wading the moist and weary course.

Annual Intramural Basketball Games Schedule Set

The annual W. A. A. Intramural Basketball tournament will begin today, it was announced by Miss Gire, sponsor of the tournament.

Ten teams have entered, and all of you basketball fans can be sure of some fast and exciting games, it is said.

Teams entered so far are: Class A—Y. G. A., Blue Streak, Coeds and Black Sheep; Class B—Wasps, Art Federation, Music Federation, Alpha Omega, Mrs. Stephenson's 31B class and Mrs. Stephenson's 47A class.

Hey, you tennisters, why don'tcha come out on April 4 and sign up. Mixed doubles, women's doubles, and women's singles will be in order.

The manager, Gladys Jansen, reports that there will be many an interesting set in swing then. So, lassies, bring your racquets, or rackets, and see what's cooking.

The W. A. A. Softball team is practicing for their game against the men faculty, which is to swing in soon.

Gloria Essman, the captain, says that there are several positions open for newcomers; so come on, gals, drag out your powder puffs and swish onto the upper field for practice, come this Monday.

Sudden showers canceled the scheduled track meet with San Mateo Junior College Saturday, according to Coach David J. Cox. He is now contacting Coach Del Fishback, J. C. mentor, in an attempt to reschedule the contest.

If the rain subsides and the ground is in proper condition, the meet may be held this weekend. If, however, the weather is still on the cloudy side, the two coaches may set the match for later in the season.

Rain or no rain, the tracksters doggedly continue their daily workouts. The Gaters meet San Francisco J. C. on April 10, and although State expects an easy win, there is no letup in practice. "San Mateo was one of the hardest meets on our schedule," Coach Cox said, "and that contest may prove the toughest of the year and when we meet them."

Coach Cox is concentrating all the squad's power in the long-distance and weight events. His only stalwart in the sprints is dashing Ed McCarthy, who is good for a first or second in the 100 and 220.

Performing solidly in the more grueling events are Wally Lozen-sky, lengthy Jim Haran, Jack Carolan, Dick Schwab and Arno Berruto and Mario Vasquez, a pair of newcomers.

Bill Stein, Bob Hodgins, Kenny Gomez, and Jim Gittens are always good for a place apiece in the weight-tossing contests.

Coach Cox is confident that the boys will finish the season in top condition. Although they began the year slowly, the tracksters are rapidly rounding into shape and should come through for a triumphant finish.

SPORT FLASHES

Paced by high flying Tom Col-lingwood, the Old Men's Athletic Club swamped Sigma Pi Sigma in their championship volleyball match, 29-18. The match was held last Friday before a near-capacity crowd in the Women's gym.

The first half was a tough struggle, with both sides scrapping for the lead. The OMAC finally came out on top at half time, 11-7.

In the second period the fraternity boys saw their rivals pull away with apparent ease, as Col-lingwood & Co. used all their basketball tactics in smashing drives across the net.

Playing their best for the OMAC were Dan Halstead, Pete Mirandi, Dave Casey and George Lorbeer. Mainstays for the defeated Sigma Pi Sigma team were Johnny Finn, captain, Ernie Loustalot and Bill Stein.

Laughs, Hisses, Boos, Applause Make 'Two Orphans' Grand Show

By GEORGE RUGE

Everyone knows that college students must be the ultimate in sophistication. Thus it is not surprising that the audience at the "Two Orphans" presentation greeted the pathetic lines of the play with loud snickers and guffaws.

The play's plot is wound up in true Lone Ranger fashion, when the precisely handsome Victor Lewin (Chevalier Maurice de Vaudrey) dashes in, saves cripple Elmo Castello from the knife of his elder brother, Jacques Frochard (Hal Wagner).

Wagner is a villain. And, believe us, he is ALL rat. But Wagner, though good, was too boisterous even for a villain. His laughs and his loving were too whole-hearted, done with too much gusto.

Orphans Dortha Eskesen and blind Frances Young were the tear-jerkers of the show. Miss Young's lines sounded "read" at first, but she warmed to the story, gave a convincing performance as she received the brunt of the Frochard villainy.

Dortha Eskesen was excellent as the sister orphan, but, sadly, the play did not end in orthodox fashion with Miss Eskesen clinching with hero, Lewin, as is the case in most mellerdrammers.

Police Commissioner Paul Scholten was similar to Movie-actor Joseph Schildkraut in one of his more viperous characterizations. Scholten, teamed with wife Patricia Ramsden, sneered the dear wife down, in contrast to her sweet and loving nature.

No critic could tell if Scholten is any good. He plays his most serious scenes with tongue in cheek, as if all is, after all, a farce.

Benny Souza and Sheila Lafferty convulsed the audience with hands and bottle respectfully. Both of these actors stole many of the scenes.

Lack of space prevents mention of the rest of the cast, save Reno Cordoni, excellent as the orphan-lugging Laffeur. Cordoni's diction is a joy to hear.

Ed. Department Plans Sophomore Conference

High Sophomores and students planning to enter the Department of Education will meet Wednesday, April 9, at 12 o'clock, in Room 208, College hall, to discuss the many questions which arise when students enter the field of teaching, according to Miss Clara Crumpton, counselor for the education department.

After the meeting, students will have an opportunity for individual conferences to discuss their own needs and programs. The education department, says Miss Crumpton, wishes to congratulate all High Sophomores on the completion of their lower division requirements and welcome them to the department.

Scholastic ratings for students are classified: Students—1.4; officers, 5.6; prominent, 2.4; honor, 4.3.

Theater Needs On New Campus Expressed

By LOUISE WINTER

"Last call for curtain! Last call for curtain!"

It's the night of the big dramatic production at S. F. State college. After weeks of rehearsal, the play is ready, and now we hear the call of "Curtain!"

This, however, is only a formality. In the first place as we glance the stage, what do we see? Almost the whole cast is on the stage frantically shifting scenery. Some have costumes on, and some have makeup half on. But they're all doing their very best to get in each other's way.

Let's duck behind a flat and see what else is going on. In the director's office, girls bump into each other without apology, trying to use the same mirror for their makeup at the same time.

2x4 DRESSING ROOMS

Across the hall (about three feet away) the boys are vainly trying magically to grow devastating mustaches. The prop room is the scene of this dilemma, but these two, two by four rooms are the only ones available for dressing rooms.

The first act was a grand success in spite of the fact that some players fell over a stage brace and almost knocked down a flat. That could happen anywhere, but it might not have happened here if there had been room enough between the wall and the flats.

AUDIENCE HELPS

Now to change scenery. Do we press a button and the scenery flies up? We do not, but definitely! If we listen closely, we can hear a whisper: "Psst, come help shift scenery." So some of the willing audience step up on the stage and start "shifting."

Flats are being dragged down and new ones put in their place. Fine, now where do we put this old flat? "Out in the alley." So out in the alley it goes. Of course, it's foggy and the paint will probably run, but is there any place backstage to put it? Not one little square inch!

After the audience has moved the scenery outside, they are back ready for the second act. This is the one with the big love scene. We could hear perfectly if the old wooden chairs in the auditorium wouldn't squeak every time someone even breathes.

NOISY FEET

Migosh! what's that? Just as it's getting good, an aspiring thespian committed the unforgivable sin of walking. That doesn't seem so bad, except every board on that stage squeaks like a rusty hinge. It's more than disconcerting to be emoting when sounds similar to a catfight come from the floor every time anyone walks backstage.

Well, the play was a success, as it always is. It's all over now until another term. There were no more calamities except the pride and joy of our stage chairs broke down in protest at being sat upon. Of course, that surprised the villain and he forgot his lines. The audience thought that was funny, too.

We can go home now and wait for tomorrow, when we'll have a gym class in the same cramped auditorium, the same squeaky stage with the same hungry termites, which is our Little Theater. It's a good thing our Little Theater is so versatile. It has gym, history and English classes with drama classes among the minority. I guess it could be worse, and maybe we do want too much, but...

Humanities Emphasizes 'Basic Developments Of Mind, Body and Character in Renaissance'

The Humanities were so called in the Renaissance period because they emphasized as an ideal the "harmonious development of mind, body and character" through the study of the liberal arts. The basic disciplines included were languages, poetry, history, music and natural sciences.

AMERICAN REVIVAL

There is a considerable revival of interest in the Humanities in many American colleges and universities at the present time.

This trend is not confined to any particular section of the United States nor is it peculiar to type or size of higher education institutions. Large state universities, small endowed colleges, women's colleges, state colleges are all represented. And among these schools which have felt the need for more emphasis on the Humanities is our own college.

The revival of humanities in this country is quite recent and has only come about as the result of the need for a re-examination of the basic issues of our modern life. The whole world is drifting or is being driven into a state definitely antagonistic to the values which humanists cherish above all others: freedom, liberty and social justice. So the main issue is whether the humanistic tradition is worth defending in our American democracy.

MODERN HUMANISTS

Who are the modern humanists? What differentiates a humanist from any one else? In answer to these questions: a humanist is an individualist. He is one who has a highly developed taste and is sensitive to the finer values in our social life. The humanist must concern himself with the quest for enduring values, and also help discover new values.

SPECIALIZATION

Our modern education is highly specialized. There is a definite need for this specialization in our society as there has always been in every society in the past. But the specialist can, by nature of a highly restricted subject matter and technique, cut himself off from many vital interests and achievements.

So there seems to be a real need for some place in the modern college curriculum for the student to have an opportunity to gain perspective and to grow culturally.

STATE'S COURSE

Philosophy 195, which is to be given this fall, hopes to justify its worth in the curriculum for these two reasons. The bringing together of art, music, philosophy, literature and history in one course is not new.

The unique thing about our Humanities course is that instructors from each of the above specialized fields of study are working together in the presentation of the materials. Further, they are all to be present at every class meeting to lead discussion, answer questions, show relationships that arise in the material.

Peace Group Adopts Spring Term Program

S. F. State's Peace Group adopted the following program tentatively at its last business meeting: April 2—Dr. Theodore Treutlein and Dr. Baxter Geeting discuss American Foreign Policy. April 4—Morley Carrothers and Joseph Edelstein, student body president and treasurer, respectively, will also discuss America's Foreign Policy.

April 18—Demonstration in the Rally Bowl. Some entertainment in the form of ballads of early American life and the famous Paul Robeson edition of ballads of Americans will be played.

April 25. This date is held open for a student town hall, and Richard Rafael has already asked to speak at this meeting. Any other students who desire to speak should contact Basil Pritchard, chairman of the Town Hall committee.

The members and those interested are reminded again that the business meetings will be held in AA7 at 12:15 every Monday.

Alpha Omega Names Fall Scholarship Date

Alpha Omega, campus social and service sorority, announced through publicity chairman, Carlene Miller, that Monday, April 7, is deadline for applications for the Annual Scholarship.

The scholarship inaugurated this fall will be awarded to an outstanding woman student. Alpha Omega, itself, is one of the more recently organized campus groups. To be eligible, a woman must have been enrolled in State for at least one semester, have a grade point average of 1.8 and a need for financial aid to further her college education.
